the docks, and this increased when it was discovered that fire had broken out on board the cruiser. The situation on board the war ship finally became such that her commander brought her alongside one of the docks here, and the flames had to be extinguished by the crew, reinforced by detachments of marines and sallors from the dockyard, before the wounded could be extricated.

Sacrificed by Heathen Pensants. ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 25.-Several heathen peasants of the village of Staraia, near Montana, province of Viatka, have been arrested and will shortly be tried at Sarapoul on the charge of murdering, be-heading and disemboweling a man whom they sacrificed to their gods.

FUTURE OF THE NEGRO.

Fred Douglass Speaks at the American Missionary Association Meeting.

LOWELL, Mass., Oct. 25.-At the opening of to-day's session of the American Missionary Association convention, Franklin Fairbanks, of Vermont, made his report, which was practically an indorsement of the financial report, submitted yesterday. The afternoon meeting was devoted to women, during which reports were heard from many sections of the country. Miss D. F. Emerson, of New York, secretary of the Bureau of Woman's Work of the association, also presented her report. The annual business meeting of the association was held and the following officers elected: President, Merrill E. Gates, Amherst, Mass.; corresponding secretaries, Rev. E. M. Strickby, D. D.; Rev. F. P. Woodbury, D. D., New York; assistant secretary, Rev. J. C. Ryder, D. D.; recording secretary, Rev. M. E. Strickby, D. D., New York; treasurer, H. W. Hubbard, New York, Invitations for holding the next annual meeting were read from Binghamton, N. Y.; Minneapolis and Detroit. After a lively discussion it was decided to let the matter rest perding the decision on the place of meetng of the national council, The closing services of the great convention began at 7 o'clock by devotional exer-cises, followed by addresses by Rev. Ly-man Abbott, D. D., of New York, who was followed by Hon, Fred Douglass. The lat-ter said he was aware that some think enough had been done for the negro, and that he should now be left to himself, and that he had himself been accused of saying something like that. In answer to the cuestion "What should be done with the negro?" he had often replied, "Do nothing with him. Give him fair play and let him alone." Emphasis had been put on the last words of his statement, ignoring what had preceded them. Mr. Douglass dwelt upon the destitute condition of the negroes when emancipated and contended that the American people should do everything in their power to educate and improve their condition. The apparent reaction against the negroes by the whites of the South was the inevitable result of the negroes progress and is not against him as a negro, but because he has emerged out of the position of slave or servant and has become a gentleman and a fellow-citizen. He concluded by saying that he looked to the churches, to the American Missionary Association and like organizations for continued aid to the negro, which had now an opportunity to lift from degradation a long enslaved and persecuted people by con-tinued firm adherence to and exercise of the power of truth, humanity and religion.

Christian Missionary Board. RICHMOND, -Vt., Oct. 25 .- The Foreign Christian Missionary Board of the Disciples' National Convention closed its session tonight. It was resolved to send a missionary to Africa during the coming year. Fifteen hundred dollars was raised towards sending Secretary McLean on a tour around the world to visit the missionary stations of the denomination. The convention elected the following officers for the ensuing year: C. L. Loos, Kentucky; vice presidents, F. M. Rains, Ohio; J. A. Lord, Ohio; G. A. Miller, Kentucky; G. B. Ranshaw. Ohio; recording secretary, I. J. Spencer, Kentucky; corresponding secretary, A. Mc-Lean, Ohio; treasurer, W. S. Dickinson,

CHEAP FOOD IN NORWAY.

Cafe Where a Good Meal Is Served for Nine Cents.

Correspondence Chicago Post. There is a novel institution in Christiania in the way of a monster cheap restaurant. It is designated by the name of Dampkjokke, which means in English steamkitchen. It was established in 1858 and is run by well-disposed persons, not as a charitable institution, but is made self-supporting. The aim is to furnish the most complete, well-cooked meal for the smallest possible sum, and, as this idea was brought forward in Chicago last winter, and may be this, I will give as accurate a description of the place as possible. It solves a problem. By an experience of thirty-six years the managers have reduced the feeding of a large numper of people to a science, for two thousand men, women and children secure a honest meal at the Dampkjokke daily at the cost of about 27 ore per capita. To get at the small amount of currency con-tained in an ore we divide a croner, or crown, by one hundred. A croner is equal to 271/2 cents of our money; therefore 27 ore is not quite 9 cents. The food, which usually consists of soup and fish and hash, and sausage, with bread and vegetables, is well cooked and clean, and a good, large portion is served to each guest. The buildng is a large two-story structure like a

The guests, after perusing the bill of fare, which is exhibited at the entrance, buy checks at the window. As they pass up they enter either the first floor or the second floor hall, as they prefer. They then make for a convenient window or passage which leads to the pantry. From this are handed plates, knives, spoons, and forks, together with portions of soup food. Guests take their seats at a long table. On this table are salt, pepper, cruet stands, bread and decanters filled with fresh drinking water, and the guests are allowed all the time necessary to enjoy their meals. There are no waiters, in fact the expense of running the institution is cut down to the smallest possible minimum. Consequently every penny saved goes into the quality of the meals. About 500 can sit down in both halls at once. It, therefore, takes nearly two hours to feed the usual attendance of 2,000.

At these odd dinners are curious combinations of people; old men, ragged, gray and footsore; hard-working laborers and men too sick to work; wrinkled women, down in the world, fighting to live; shop girls with clean, bright faces, but who can ill afford 10 cents from their pitiful wages; women who have lost all by dissipation and drink and boys who have no homes; flerce Ana hists, driven out of other countries, and pitiable stowaways who have just arirved from foreign ports. Two thou-sand, made homeless and hungry by some cause known only to themselves, and all looking with hungry eyes to one good square meal per day, thanking God for the Dampkjokke. The great beauty of this institution lies in the fact that it is not charity. There exists in the breast of those who sit down to this collation the same independence as the king enjoys in his palace, and they smack their lips with the satisfaction that they have paid full fare for what they have received.

First Importation of Serum. NEW YORK, Oct. 25.-A consignment of drug upon which the attention of the medical profession the world over is centered has just come through the custom house. It is a small quantity of the new remedy for diphtheria, the antitoxine serum. This is the first of the drug to reach this country from the laboratory of Prof. Bearing, of Berlin, its discoverer. The consignment came to Dr. George E Shrady, the editor of the Medical Record, and Dr. Louis Fischer, also of this city. The quantity they received is very small, The serum that has been in use here previous to this importation was from the laboratory of Prof. Aronson.

WABASH AND ANDERSON MAKING A BID FOR $200,000 SHOPS.

Rev. Z. T. Sweeney's Twenty-Third Anaiversary in a Columbus Pulpit-Y. W. C. A. in Session at Franklin.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. WABASH, Ind., Oct. 25 .- At a meeting of citizens of Wabash last night it was determined to have the County Commissioners meet in special session and levy a tax in Noble township to aid the Big Four railway in rebuilding its shops, which burned Tuesday night. To-day, on petition of twenty-five freeholders, the commissioners met and ordered a special election in this township for Dec. 3 to vote on the proposition to appropriate $5,000 to the Big Four. Positive assurance has been given by the Big Four management that on the guarantee of this sum the company will erect mammoth shops for the Michigan division here, rebuild its line into the city and make improvements costing $200,000. It is proposed to locate the new shop on the south side of the Wabash river or in the Western part of the city, plenty of land being available for the purpose.

Anderson Wants the Shops.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. ANDERSON, Ind., Oct. 25 .- Since the destruction of the Big Four shops at Wabash citizens of Anderson have taken active steps toward getting the new shops located in this city. Andrson is now a distations on the road. It is estimated that the new shops will cost $200,000, half of which will be asked from the city in the shape of a subsidy.

REV. Z. T. SWEENEY HONORED. Church Celebrates Twenty-Third Anniversary of His Pastorate. Special to the Indianapolis Journal. COLUMBUS, Ind., Oct. 25 .- Rev. Z. T. Sweeney, pastor of the Tabernacle Christian Church, of this city, was tendered a reception by the members of his congregation at the church to-night that surpassed anything of the kind that has heretofore been given in this city. The reception was the anniversary of the twenty-third year his service as pastor of the congrega tion. The Tabernacle Christian Church of this city is said to have the largest membership of any Christian church in this State, and Rev. Sweeney has made it so by his persistent work during the twentythree years he has been its pastor.

Major W. T. Strickland presided as master of ceremonies to-night, and Rev. Dobbs, of the First Baptist Church, offered prayer. An address on behalf of the church was delivered by Elder J. B. Cobb, its senior pastor; on behalf of the Sunday school by M. T. Reeves; the Ladies' Aid Society by Miss M. Miller; the Woman's Missionary Society by Miss Redman, and the Y. P. S. C. E. by Olva A. Lewellen. Short addresses were also made by Revs. Shannon, Curtis and Dr. Swinney. Music was furnished by Professor Mason and lecorated, and the following motto in flash lights encircled the pulpit: "In essentials, unity; in nonessentials, liberty; in all things charity.' Beneath this was suspended the life-size bust-photograph of Rev. Sweeney. In the center of the pulpit was a fountain sur-rounded by earthen banks. The galleries of the church were covered with beautiful autumn leaves. To the left of the pulpit was an alcove in which Rev. Sweeney and wife and Rev. J. B. Cobb and wife stood and received their friends. At the close of the reception a lunch was served in the church parlors, the guests entering under the archway over which was placed "1871," and on retiring passed under "1894."

FRANKLIN, Ind., Oct. 25 .- The State convention of the Indiana Y. W. C. A. of Colleges convened here this morning. There are about one, hundred delegates present, most of whom arrived this afternoon. The opening session was held in the Christian Church, which was crowded with the members of the association and their friends. Welcome addresses were delivered by Prof. C. H. Hall on the part of Franklin Col-lege, and by Rev. L. P. Marshall on the part of the city. Devotional services were led by Elder Atwater. The address of the evening was delivered by Rev. A. A. Pfanstiel, of Lafayette. His subject was "Girlhood." The address was exceptionally fine and well received. The session to-morrow will be held in the Baptist and Presbyterian churches. The convention is the guest of the Franklin College Y. W. C. A. The meetings will continue until Sunday even-

SEVERAL DAMAGE SUITS.

Mercantile Agency Sued for Rating Good People as Bad.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 25 .- The Merchants' Mercantile Agency of Chicago, doing business in this city, manages the publication of a "Credit Experience Guide," in which citizens are rated as to their standing in a financial way. As a result many are badly worked up over the publication, claiming that they have been mis-represented. Joseph A. Sanderson, a news-paper reporter, who claims that he does not owe a cent on earth, has been rated as a man not to be trusted, and as a result sues for $5,000 damages. Mrs. Roche Heimann, a wealthy woman, is rated in the book as in the same class with Mr. Sanderson, and to-day she sued for $10,000 damages. Others also have threatened to institute suits.

GROUND TO PIECES. Fate of Two Men Struck by a Vandalia Fast Train. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

GREENCASTLE, Ind., Oct. 25,-This morning, at 6 o'clock, Edward Nees and Eli Crouse were instantly killed by a train at Reelsville, this county, nine miles west of this city. They were in a wagon and were going to mill. The crossing is right in the village and a view of the road is obstructed by storerooms. The train was the fast eastbound Indianapolis express on the Vandalla, due here at 3:22 a. m. It was three hours late and was running at a high rate of speed. The horses had cleared the track, but the wagon was squarely struck and smashed into splinters. The men both leave families. The coroner has been working on the case all day.

The Women Will Try to Vote. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

ANDERSON, Ind., Oct. 25 .- The Women's Christian Temperance Union here to-night took the first step towards supporting Helen M. Gougar in voting at the November elections. The union members are to approach the polls in their respective pre-cincts and ask for ballots. If refused they will leave the polls and make a report to the State officers. Mrs. Gougar is to be the only one to test the constitutionality of United States laws relative to women voting: The women do not expect to get the privilege of voting, but will express their desire and demand woman's rights.

Been Married Since June.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. FORT WAYNE, Ind., Oct. 25 .- The community was startled to learn this evening that Louis J. Babilya, a popular bachelor and Democratic politician, and candidate for Representative from this county had been married since last June to Mrs. John Porter, widow of the late real-estate agent. They have kept the secret from their most intimate friends until to-day. The announcement is made that they would be at home at the handsome residence of the groom in Lakeside.

State Brewers in Session.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 25.-The Indiana State Brewers' Association met here to-day, the object being to discuss the matter of changes in the existing excise laws for the better protection of the brewers, coopers and bottlers, and to take the necessary steps to procure favorable action thereon by the next Legislature. The brewers of the State claim to have lost over $40,000 last year as a result of defective laws.

Indiana Deaths.

OLD OCEAN IN A FURY.

ocound Swell Plays Havoc at Coney Island Resorts.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.-The World this morning says: "Coney island has been lashed by a storm for the past forty-eight hours such as it has not experienced since the memorable one of 1887. The rain of Wednesday, accompanied by a hard-driving northeasterly wind, started the music. A high tide followed and, with the latter, a ground swell, one such as Coney island has rarely experienced, made things lively. It was high tide shortly after 4 p. m. yesterday. At that hour the ocean was placid as a baby asleep, but suddenly the great combers developed into high-rolling waves of green which, as they approached the shore, broke upon the beach or against the buikheads in front of the Oriental, Manhattan and Brighton Beach hotels with a roar that could be heard far inland. Each receding wave carried away with it a few feet of the beach, digging up piles and bulkheads and undermining the smaller pavillons near the ocean. Between Sea Breeze avenue and the ocean lies a strip of Brooklyn city property, controlled by the park department. Yesterday an engineer was sent down from Brooklyn to find out how the property could be saved from further inroads of the sea. The engineer discovered that there was nothing left worth mentioning save Sea Breeze avenue, and very little of that. The rest of the beautiful beach had been carried away by the waves and added to the ac-cumulation of sand known as Rockaway

ELEVEN MEN ENTOMBED.

Imprisoned in a Mine by the Giving Way of an Upper Level.

IRONWOOD, Mich., Oct. 25.-What may prove to be the worst accident in the hiscory of the Menominee range occurred on the fourth level of shaft No. 1 at the Pewabic mine, at 3 o'clock this afternoon. One man is known to have been killed and eleven others are entombed, and their fate will not be known for eighteen hours, as it will take that length of time for as large a force of men as can be employed in the narrow shaft to clear away the rubbish. The accident was caused by the sandstone capping which overhung the room giving away with sufficient force to crush the timbers without any warning. The settling commenced in an old room above the third level about one hundred feet in height. In an interview this evening Superintendent Brown expressed himself as being confident that all the entombed men would be taken out alive. This will depend very much on whether the air is pure and of sufficient quantity to keep them alive. Some miners interviewed seem to think that the supply will not prove sufficient, and that it is charged with poisonous gases. The body of Frank Gabaardi, the man killed, has been taken out. Among the men imprisoned are John Farrell, Peter Hellberg, William Rickard and William Thomas. All have families.

ON THE PLATFORM AT O'DONNELL'S BIG SHELBYVILLE MEETING.

Governor Matthews's "Nonpartisan" Racket Didn't Work at Elwood-Myers Counts His Audience.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Oct. 25 .- The biggest political demonstration of the campaign thus far took place at the opera house this evening. Patrick O'Donnell, the eloquent Irish orator, spoke for the Republicans, and the room would not hold the people who turned out to hear him. Hundreds were unable to get inside and went away disappointed, while hundreds of others for the two hours he spoke. Fifteen men who have heretofore been prominent among the local Democracy occupied chairs on the stage as part of the committee. O'Donnell was in his happiest humor and made a particularly fine speech. His allusions to Mc-Kinley were interrupted with cheers and shouting which called to mind the old-time enthusiasm of national campaigns. The interest, the large attendance at Republican speakings and the number of men who are openly changing their politics warrants the hope expressed on many hands that the Democratic majority will be greatly reduced, if not entirely wiped out in old

COLDLY RECEIVED.

Governor Matthews Met with a Severe Frost at Elwood.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. ELWOOD, Ind., Oct. 25.-This was Democratic day in Elwood. Governor Claude Matthews was in the city, and the local Democracy conceived the idea of holding a "grand reception which should be thoroughly nonpartisan" in the forenoon and terminate in a big Democratic blow-out in the afternoon. Realizing the utter impossibility of raising any enthusiasm among members of their own party, they thought to enlist Republican aid to secure a big crowd and then claim it all for a Democratic uprising to greet the Governor. The purpose was cunningly hid, but the fact remained patent to every Republican that Governor Matthews did not come to Elwood on nonpartisan business, nor was he here in the capacity of Governor of Indiana, but as a speaker who is stumping the State in the interest of the Democratic ticket and W. D. Bynum. As a result, only about two hundred people, including Democrats and Republicans, met him at the train. A carriage was in waiting, and the Citizens' Band headed the procession and escorted him to the hotel. At the Hotel Stevenson he shook hands with a large number of citizens who called to see him. At the train there was not a particle of enthusiasm. Not a single cheer was given. The Demo crats are not in a position or condition in this city to raise any enthusiasm. If Gov. Matthews had come to Elwood in his ca-pacity as Governor his reception would have been spontaneous and genuine. But his visit having a string to it, and that string in the hands of the Democracy, did not create the outpouring of the people the Democracy anticipated. In the "grand parade" in honor of Gov. Matthews this afternoon, 154 people were in line, one hundred of whom came up from Anderson. The Governor addressed a moderate-sized crowd in a grove south of the city, after which he left for Tipton, where he spoke to-night. The "grand rally" was a total failure, as only forty-seven Elwood Great Meeting at Cannelton. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

CANNELTON, Ind., Oct. 25.—The greatest political meeting of this campaign was held, last night, in this city, at Cummings's Opera House. Hon. Joseph B Cheadle, the war veteran and ex-member of Congress from the Ninth district, was the speaker. The celebrated Mechanics' Band, of Tell City, furnished the music. By 8 o'clock the hall, which will seat one thousand people, was filled, the aisles and every available space being occupied. Mr. Cheadle captured his hearers and for two hours the crowd gave him the closest attention. The speaker's reference to the manner in which the Democratic Congress looked after the interests of the laboring people by taxing them on sugar alone, $43,000,000 annually, while silks and laces were put on the free list-"all for the poor man"-convulsed the audience with laughter, while his earnest and eloquent appeals for the proper care of the old soldier brought forth tears. The Democrats made an attempt to put a damper on the meeting by billing Maj. G. V. Menzies, at Acme Hall, with the result that the Major spoke to just 150 people, by actual count. Mr. Cheadle's meeting closed with three rousing cheers for the Republican ticket.

Myers Counted Ninety-Eight Noses. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

REDKEY, Ind., Oct. 25.-At 1:30 o'clock to-day, after a street parade with a brass band, Hon. W. R. Myers addressed a meeting consisting of ninety-eight voters, thirty of whom were Republicans. Mr. Myers counted the audience, and stated his reason for so doing was that the Indianapolis Journal would come out with the assertion that there were not forty persons present to hear him. He confined his speech strictly to State issues, and endeavored to make his audience believe that all of the State debt that has been piling up for the past twelve years through Democratic extravagance was caused by their erecting so many public buildings. He also made the astounding statement that had it not been for the Democratic party Indiana would have had no free school system. There was little enthusiasm and scarcely any of the younger element of the party present. Although many were in town, they refused to attend even after being earnestly solicited to do so by the party heelers. Redkey will be alive with Republicans on Tuesday next, when ex-Governor Foraker Cheered a Mention of Charles Henry. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

ELWOOD, Ind., Oct. 25.-One of the largest and most enthusiastic Republican meetings held in this city during the present campaign assembled at the opera house last night to listen to Hon. Will Cumback. The auditorium was filled and the aisles were crowded by working men, who, with their families, were present. At the mention of Charles L. Henry's name they cheered with such vigor and enthusiasm that the speaker was compelled to pause until they had subsided. The address lasted over an hour and was a logical, forcible and clear presentation of the position of the Republican party. The audience was largely composed of men who work with their hands in the different shops and factories of the city, and the deafening cheers with which they greeted the speaker's reference to the Republican party's position on protection to American industries and American workingmen left no doubt as to the actual feeling and position of Elwood workingmen on this question,

Delaware County Meetings.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. MUNCIE, Ind., Oct. 25 .- Last night at Eaton Congressman Henry U. Johnson filled a postponed engagement to a packed house. Last night at Oakville there was a rousing big meeting, at which Edward M. White, Walter Ball, John Bingham and E. E. Botkin made twenty-minute speeches. It was the kind of a meeting that pleased the audience. Charles F. Foster, city attorney of Anderson, invaded Delaware county last night and gave the residents of Salem township at Yorktown a good speech. To-night, at Daleville, Hon. Henry U. Johnson spoke at the Town Hall, which was so chilly on the occasion of Mortimer Nye's visit to that town Tuesday night. R. A. Brown was at Albany to-night, and that little town gave him a big crowd. The farmers were out and cheered long and loud. Mr. Johnson talks at New Burlington to-morrow evening.

WINCHESTER, Ind., Oct. 25 .- Hon, H. C. Gooding, of Indianapolis, spoke at Huntsville to-night to a big gathering. His speech was one of the most masterly presentations of Republican doctrines heard here. Dr. Pierce and three members of "Big Ten. No. 1," had a splendid crowd at Maxville, there being no room in the town large enough to accommodate the people. One very interesting part of the programme was the blackboard lessons in Democratic taxation given by Deputy County Auditor John H. Boltz. R. A. Brown at Farmland.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. FARMLAND, Ind., Oct. 25.-R. A. Brown, the Republican orator and editor of Franklin, spoke at the Opera House here last night. He was listened to with attention for an hour and a half. His address was devoted mainly to the tariff and the Democratic gerrymander in Indiana, and it bristled with good points. Four Democrats were present, one of whom declared his intention of voting the Republican ticket next month. Mr. Brown was frequently interrupted with applause. At the conclusion of the address Hon. A. O. Marsh made a brief

Henry's Big Crowd at Maxwell. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

MAXWELL, Ind., Oct. 25 .- Charles L. Henry, candidate for Congress, spoke here to-night to an audience of fully one thousand people. A large delegation, headed by the Eden band, came from Eden and Fort-ville, and a delegation of five hundred, with two bands and 150 glass blowers at the head of the procession, came from Green-field. Mr. Henry spoke for one hour and a half, slashing Mr. Bynum's record on all sides. The speaker was frequently interrupted by tremendous applause.

Nye Seems to Be a Failure.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. FAIRMOUNT, Ind., Oct. 25.-Lleutenant Governor Mortimer Nye addressed a fairsized audience at Parker's Opera House here last night. Fully one-half of those present were Republicans. The meeting was even a worse failure than the one addressed by Hon. A. N. Martin last week, the speaker failing to arouse any enthusi-asm whatever. At the close of his speech Mr. Nye begged his Democratic brethren to give their party another trial.

A Democrat's Gloomy Speech.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. FORTVILLE, Ind., Oct. 25 .- A. M. Sweeney, Clerk of the Supreme Court, made an apologetic speech before an audience composed of seventy women and children and sixty forlorn Democrats here last evening. His effort was entirely vold of enthusiasm and fell flat. Republicans here are thoroughly organized and expect to make a good showing at the coming election.

Mayor Dunlap, of Anderson, Spoke. Special to the Indianapolis Journal. NEW CASTLE, Ind., Oct. 25.-Last night Mayor Dunlap, of Anderson, made the best speech of the campaign at this point in the courthouse. The large court room was packed and the crowd nearly shook the building down at times in its bursts of enthusiasm. The brilliant young orator made

They Were Full of Bitterness and Marked by Quarrels and Isolation.

Prof. W. M. Sloane's new Life of Napoleon, which begins in the November number of the Century, devotes more attention than any previous memoir to the youth of Napoleon. Of his school days Prof. Sloane

It was an old charge that the sons of poor gentlemen destined to be artillery oflicers were bred like princes. Brienne, with nine other similar acadamies, had been but recently founded as a protest against the luxury which had reigned in the military schools at Paris and La Fleche. Both the latter were closed for a time because they could not be reformed; that at Paris was afterward reopened as a finishing school Various religious orders were put in charge of the new colleges, and instructed to se-cure simplicity of life and manners, the formation of character, and other desirable benefits, each one in its own way in the school or schools intrusted to it. The result so far had been a failure; there were simply not ten first-rate instructors to be found in France for the new positions in each branch; the instruction was therefore much impaired, and with it declined the right standards of behavior, while the old notions of hollow courtliness and conventional manner flourished as never before. Money and polished manners, therefore, were the thing most needed to secure kind treatment for an entering boy. These were exactly what the young foundation scholar from Corsica had not. The ignorant and unworldly Minim fathers could neither foresee nor, if they had foreseen, alleviate the miseries incident to his arrival under such

At Autun Napoleon had at least enjoyed the sympathetic society of his mild and unemotional brother, whose easy-going nature would smooth many a raugh place. He was now entirely without companionship, resenting from the outset both the illnatured attacks and the playful personal allusions through which boys so often begin, and with time knit ever more firmly, their inexplicable friendships. To the taunts about Corsica, which began immediately, he answered coldly, "I hope one day to be in a position to give Corsica her liberty." Entering on another occasion a room in which, unknown to him, there hung a portrait of the hated Cholseul, he started back as he caught sight of it and burst into bitter revilings; for this he was compelled to undergo chastisement. Brienne was a nursery for the qualities first developed at Autun. Dark, solitary and untamed, the new scholar assumed the indifference of wounded vanity, despised all pastimes, and found delight either in books or in scoraful exasperation of his comrades when compelled to associate with them. There were quarrels and bitter fights, in which the Ishmaelite's hand was against every other. Sometimes in a kind of frenzy he inflicted serious wounds on his fellow-students. At length even the teachers mocked him, and deprived him of his position as captain in the school battalion.

The climax of the miserable business was reached when, to a taunt that his ancestrywas nothing, "his father a wretched tip-staff," Napoleon replied by challenging his tormentor to fight a duel. For this offense he was put in confinement while the instigator went unpunished. It was by the intervention of Marbeuf, who came in person, that his young friend was at length released. Eruised and wounded in spirit, the boy would gladly have shaken the dust of Brienne from his feet, but necessity forbade. Either from the talk Napoleon had with his protector, or through a dramatic but unauthenticated letter purporting to have been written by him to his friends in Corsica, and still in existence, Marbeuf learned that the chiefest cause of all the bitterness was the inequality between the pocket allowances of the young French nobles and that of the young Corsican. The kindly general displayed the generosity of family friend and gladly increased his gratuity, administering at the same time a smart rebuke to the boy for his readiness to take offense. He likewise introduced his young charge to Mme. De Brienne, whose mansion was near by. This noble woman became a second mother to the lonely child; his vacations and holidays were passed with her; her tenderness softened the rude nature, the more so as she knew the value of tips to a set outboy, and administered them, liberally and ju-

Suggestions for the Celebration of as Old-Fashioned Festival.

Ladies' Home Companion. "In this age of novelty in entertainments, every occasion which furnishes opportunity for a party that can be given in any style that is unique, is eagerly embraced. There-fore, a Hallowe'en frolic can be made very enjoyable to both young and old of the

"Of course, it goes without saying that old customs should be introduced for this one night, and nothing elaborate should be attempted "The parlor and dining room should be decorated with strings of nuts in their brown coats (a few may be gilded for variety) and rosy-cheeked apples. Bunches of grapes, being the fruit in season, are also appropriate. Candles in old-fashloned candlesticks should be placed on mantels and tables. As the festival is one associated very generally with the land of Scott and Burns, the plaid colors of Scot-land may be used in ribbons and drapperles. "The old Scotch games peculiar to All-Hallowe'en should, of course, form the amusement of the evening. "An open fire is essential for the timely sports, and where the house contains an old-fashioned fireplace, whether in par-lor or kitchen, it should be called into use-for the occasion. In front of it the girls for the occasion. In front of it the girls lay chestnuts in pairs, one being the name of the one placing it there, the other her future bridegroom. Then they are eagerly watched. If the nuts burn steadily side by side, a quiet wedded life may be expected, but if snapping and popping take place a stormy life is predicted.

"Bobbing for the apples thrown in a tub of water is another Hallowe'en sport, but is scarcely pleasant to young ladies. Pairs is scarcely pleasant to young ladies. Pairs of straws or needles may be named and thrown upon the water, to float or sink, as omens of future sorrow or joy. A stick of sealing wax or a bar of lead melted in an iron spoon held over the fire, and the liquid dropped a little at a time in a bowl of cold water, will indicate by the shape it takes the fate of the one dropping it. "A very popular mode of discovering one's fortune is to peer the apples and throw the parings over the shoulder, when they are supposed to form the initials of the sweetheart. Then the seeds may be counted to ascertain further particulars of the life of the married ones. "Eating an egg-shellful of salt, and retiring without quenching the thirst, is said to be sure to bring a vivid picture of the unknown one in the dreams of Hablowe'en night. "The old Scotch custom of a girl going forth alone in the drakness of the night, and as the clock chimes out the hour of 12, waiking around the house backward, with a mirror in her hand, in which the reflection of her fate is expected to appear, is an experience few girls care to go through.

"The key charm is quite amusing. A key is inserted in the Bible, at the Song of is inserted in the Bible, abouter and sixth Solomon, the eighth chapter and sixth verse. The sides of the book are then tied together, two girls each put a finger into the handle of the key, and repeat in turn a letter of the alphabet and the verse marked; the id a is that when the initial letter of the f thre husband is called the key will turn. As this is in the hands of the girls much amusement is derived from this old supers tion. "Refreshment for an All-Hallowe'en party should be r. ther substantial, as the ex-ercise taken in games and lively sports is calculated to give healthy young people vigorous appetites. The menu may be made very suggestive of the festival. Nutcakes and candies, apple jelly, roast apples and apple tarts, nuts, raisins and grapes, with oysters and game in season, will all be relished. Scotch buns, johnny-cake, etc., will add to the appropriateness of the sup-"When the old-fashloned gowns of grandmothers or other ancestors can be found in attic chests they may be remodeled for wear at a Hallowe'en frolic, adding much to the amusement of the young folks."

Lili Lehman's Lost Voice.

New York Evening Sun. It will be a grief to the many admirers of Lill Lehman, in New York, to leatn that never again will that admirable actress and almost incomparable prima donna, appear in opera. After the most exquicite care and treatment, and patient effort, and the complete restoration of her health, she finds herself with irreparably injured vocal chords. She can sing sweetly, but with only the faintest cohe of her ald time power, short simple picces of music she nopes in time to be able to appear occasionally is concert, though further professional effort is really not necessary, for Mme. Lehman is a rich wo nan. She carned great sums while she was on the stage and has never been a spend wrift.

Indeed, it was her well-known fondness for adding to her big fortune that led to the ruin of her voice. The last winter she spent in New York was one of the busies! of her life. She sang many long, difficult operas, was constantly in rehearsal, and had a large class of advanced pupils. A hitch occuring in the cast for "The Huguenots," Abbey asked Mme. Lehman to take the leading role. She refused, for at that time she earned $1,200 every night she sang; so the manager offered her $200 more for the special occasion. She insisted she was not quite herself, was overdone with her regular work, and to take the part meant severer labors. When $2,000 for the single performance was offered she yielded, undertook the heavy rehearsals, but the day after appearing in "The Huguenots" she kept her bed, and has not since then appeared in public. Those who attended her great benefit night five years ago, when the women of New York presented her with a splendid diamond necklace, saw her at the height of her powers. She grew stout after the German fashion, but her voice never lost its quality, passion and sweetness until the very end, and as an actress Calve is not her superior.
